JOEL FRENETTE

About me:

Joel Frenette

I've been a computer geek ever since I learned to program video games on my Atari 130XE back in 1987. I have been a successful IT project manager for the past decade but my true passions are training, coaching and helping people achieve their dreams and goals by leveraging technology.

I've seen some great articles online and some cool websites that outline and describe some wonderful opportunities for people to make few bucks, but none as complete and exhaustive as my guide. I started my work-from-home journey when my son was born 12 years ago. At that time, it was not common for a man to raise a young boy alone and even more difficult to do while working full time.

I was amazed how difficult it was for me to find legit opportunities to earn money from home even while working as remote tech support!

Companies would often require me to drive into their head offices, so that I could literally take calls and remote into computer systems on the other side of the planet.

It made no sense. There had to be a way to work from home and make money.

I was determined to find, test and evaluate as many work from home opportunities as I could find, and help as many people as I could. Growing up in eastern Canada, I knew how $20 a day could change someone's life, and if I could help people earn this much than I would feel amazing fulfillment.

I am truly blessed to have found so many ways to make money from home, that are legit and I offer them all to you here in this eBook.

I offer them at no cost to you. You may need to spend some time creating accounts, signing up, and you will be learning a few things along the way, but this eBook can be a life-saving income source for those in need.

Again, I offer at no cost to you, but I do ask that you share this with as many people as you can!

Validately

Validately pays $10 per test and the tests only take about 15 minutes each to complete

Once you register as a tester with Validately, they may contact you wanting you to review a website. Tests are available to take on smartphones, tablets, and PCs. You will need to invest in a webcam, as the testing is live. The moderators will ask you questions, and your responses are recorded. They may ask you your opinion, or ask you to click on a certain area. You might be asked to try to go through a sample transaction, so they can get feedback on how usable the site is. Payment from Validately is through Paypal. Payment amounts vary, and some tests may be short, say 15 minutes, and some may be longer, an hour or more.

APPLY HERE

UserTesting

UserTesting pays $10 per test and the tests only take about 20 minutes each to complete

Once you've found a test that you're a good match for, you will use the UserTesting on-screen recorder and a microphone to record your thoughts as you explore the website. Your face will NOT be recorded, and the company you are reviewing will not know your name. UserTesting will give you questions as prompts, so just explore the site and answer the questions to the best of your ability. The questions aren't difficult. You're just giving your feedback on the site in general. You'll have a couple of written questions to fill out afterwards too. Then, once you're done, UserTesting will send your feedback to the company and you'll get paid via Paypal!

APPLY HERE

UserZoom

UserZoom pays 10$ per test and the tests only take between 10 and 20 minutes.

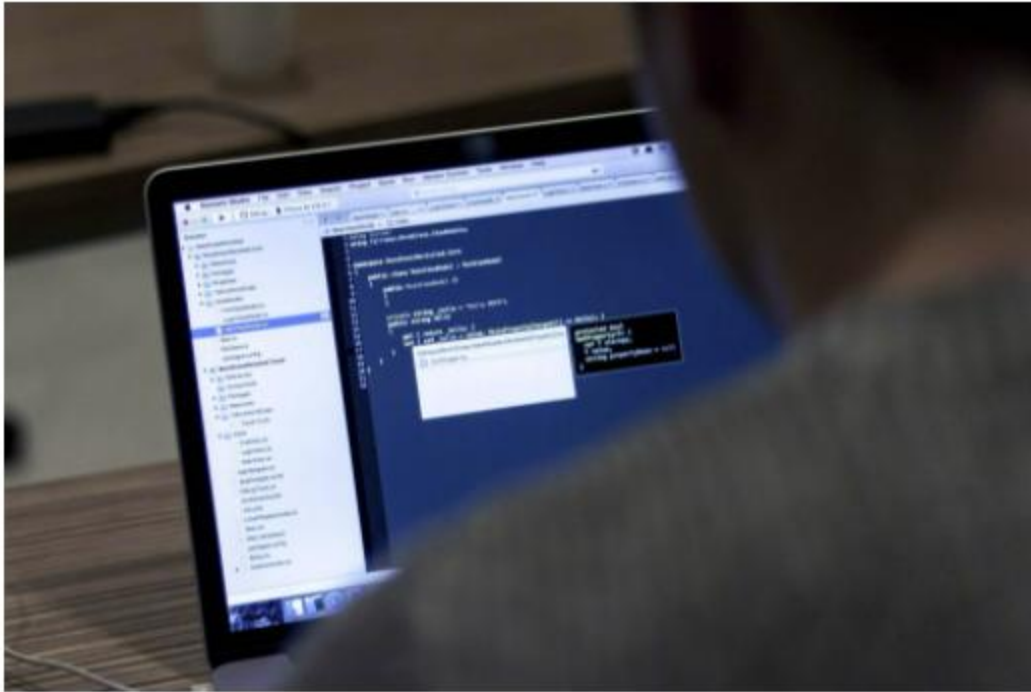

Once you fill out the application, you will be sent a sample test. You will need a working webcam, or smartphone with a front-facing camera. Most of the studies take between 10 and 20 minutes to complete.

Getting paid for testing has been really easy. They deposit directly into your Paypal account.

Payments are made within 21 days of testing, and your tests are usually reviewed and approved within 2-3 days. So far since I joined, I have taken 6 tests, and have been paid $10 each time. I have not qualified for all tests, but there have been some good opportunities.

Tests are based on user demographics.

APPLY HERE

TryMyUi

TryMyUi pays $10 per test, usually takes 15-20 minutes.

The TryMyUi application process is pretty simple. First, you'll fill out a pretty standard form that has basic demographic information on it. Kinda like signing up for a survey site, but seems to be much easier and not as many questions.

After you complete the form you'll need to submit a sample test. You'll need to record a sample test video along with a written test response. Both are very simple, they provide you with what they expect and how to kill both tests.

APPLY HERE

UserBrain

The pay varies, but on average you can expect to make about $10 for every site you test.

Website testing involves reviewing various sites, and recording your observations about navigation, ease of use, whether links work, and any other useful information.

Try MY UI focuses on testing websites for usability, so you'll capture video of your computer screen (screencast) while recording your impressions (via microphone) about the website's design, and complete specific tasks the client is testing for.

Tests range from 15 to 20 minutes long, and you'll be paid $10 for every test.

APPLY HERE

WhatUsersDo

I netted $10 after about 20 minutes.

What Users Do is a usability testing or UX testing platform, which rewards you for recording your interactions, reactions, thoughts and opinions as you browse a client's website or app.

Usability testing is simply the process of observing and analysing how people use a product, so companies can improve its user experience and increase sales. Therefore, different from a marketing research, they are not only interested in your opinions but also how you interact with the website/app and what are your instant reactions.

uTest

How much are you paid for each bug? Well, as you may guess, it depends entirely on the severity of your bugs (e.g.: how critical your bug is). You are paid the most for the most critical ones, from $16.00-$21.00 per exceptional bug!

With 200,000+ testers, uTest platform is considered as the number one professional network for testers. On this platform, you actually can find almost everything you need to breathe the air of testing.

People give you a project and you get paid for each bug you find in their products. More bugs more money. You can test any time you like in the way you want. No more control from your grumpy boss..you are now your own boss.

APPLY HERE

TestBirds

Most tests pay from $8-$50. Most beginner tests will pay around $10. More difficult tests pay higher.

Pretty much anyone can create an account at TestBirds, but before you can complete tests, you'll need to pass their test. From what I've heard the beginners test is incredibly easy and they give you some pointers on what they expect before you start the test.

Once you've passed the test, you'll need to add what devices you'd like to take tests on. Once you're done, you'll start to receive test notifications from TestBirds. You DO NOT have to complete every test. You can review each test, see the requirements and payment before accepting it.

APPLY HERE

PlayTestCloud

The reward for doing a good test is at least $9, and for testers that did a good job in the past they sometimes (depending on lots of factors, randomness being one) have tests that pay even more.

What is PlaytestCloud?

They're a crowdsourcing service that provides video recordings of people playing iOS and Android games for the first time.

You download a new game and play while it records your session in the background. It uploads while you play. Then you have nothing more to do. Uploads are around 5-10 mb/minute, but it really depends on the game.

APPLY HERE

Testlio

How much are you paid for each bug? Well, as you may guess, it depends entirely on the severity of your bugs (e.g.: how critical your bug is). You are paid the most for the most critical ones

Testlio is a full-service software testing solution. They remove the need to build an entire QA department in-house by partnering with customers and assisting in managing their testing process using their community of top testers. ... Their vision is to completely change how QA is done.

BetaFamily

Some apps are free, but many are $5.00 and $10.00 rewards for testing.

The Beta Family is a beta testing service for iOS and Android applications, enabling developers to beta test their apps on real people, before they're published on iTunes App Store or Android Market.

Developers can distribute their apps easily whilst gaining feedback from real users. Testers can try new apps before they become fully available and get rewarded if they write a good test report.

Appen Butler Hill

Evaluators make around $11 per hour

Appen is also often looking for web search evaluators. This company focuses on expansion into new markets, keen to improve search results for their clients and their target audiences. They advertise their freelance web search evaluators have an average workload of 4 hours a day; reportedly. Appen also provides training and advancement opportunities. You have an even better chance of working with Appen if you're bilingual as they offer services 150 languages.

APPLY HERE

iSoftStone

The pay starts at $13 per hour

The Online Rater positions at this company are often long-term. This company works with Bing as opposed to Google. As such, you will be completing your work on Internet Explorer. I've heard this is one of the few companies, perhaps the only one, that doesn't have a non-compete.

The current job listing at the time of writing this post gave an hourly commitment of 10-25 hours per week

APPLY HERE

Leapforce

The pay is pretty standard at a rumored $13 to $14 per hour

The testing can be pretty extensive and intensive. It's highly advisable to really study their guide prior to taking the test.

Leapforce is seeking those familiar and active with Google products – Gmail, Google Play, Google+. They are also frequently hiring bilingual agents. Leapforce also looks for those who are not only familiar with American culture but have specific areas of interest.

APPLY HERE

Lionbridge

Their internet assessors reportedly average about $13.70 hourly.

If you can use a search engine and provide a decent analysis of the results, you can turn that time into money by becoming a search engine evaluator. Lionbridge is currently offering the position of "Ads Assessor," and the job requirements involve reviewing search results to improve their quality and relevance. Lionbridge requires you to work a minimum of 10 hours to week (up to a maximum of 20), and you can fit that around a full-time day job if you're a go-getter

APPLY HERE

AskWonder

You can make up to $2000 per month

AskWonder.com lists questions on their website that various clients have submitted on something called a central dashboard.

When you join the company as a researcher, you get to have your pick which questions, (also known as assignments) to answer. You are then paid for each question that you successfully answer. The company claims that each search takes approximately 12 to 20 minutes.
